ne paragraph below, cross out the sentences that are not related to the main idea.

I love food, but I do not like to cook. First of all, I am not very good at cooking. I cut myself, I burn food, and I spill things that stain all my clothes. My clothes are nice things that cost most of my money, even though I usually get them on sale. The other day I stained a nice corduroy shirt which made me really mad. It was robin's egg blue. Then there is something about the ingredients that is a great mystery to me. I usually like mysteries - in fact, I check out mysteries each week at the library. I can follow a recipe very closely, but it never comes out right. The food might be too salty, too sweet, or just too weird. And then there's the mess. I need to clean up a lot. It is such a big mess right now. The food sticks to pots and pans and washes down the sink. There is a really strange stain on the ceiling in the hallway; it looks like a dead animal on the floor, and I get covered in flour or onion juice. When I'm cooking, I always get something on my face. I'm anxious to taste my masterpiece, but it is always a disaster. There are so many dishes that I don't have time to go out and eat. I should just give up cooking altogether!
